Being Intelligent

Edition 22 nov 2024

Being intelligent

We do not believe that technology around us is intelligent. Or that statistics and probabilities consist of intelligence.

We, also, do not believe that simple access to consciousness or human capacities defines intelligence. Particularly because, accessing the consciousness of "others", remains extremely complex.

We believe that we need to understand better what being intelligent is.

We believe that this understanding goes hand in hand with grasping the context that makes something be or appear intelligent.

We believe being intelligent implies that there is something at stake, something to lose.

We believe that we always need to learn more from animals, plants, micro-organisms, but also, from our interaction with humans, organic or non-organic agents.

Not only learn from them but also collaborate, experiment, and live with them.

A new symbiose is on its way and being(s) intelligent will define it.

About TED & TEDx

TED

TED is an original conference format designed to convey reactions to a wide audience on topics related to Technology, Entertainment and Design. TEDx conferences are TED events organized by independent teams of TED, and under TED license. Since 2013, we organize the TEDxGeneva conferences in Geneva. For each edition, we invite about 10 people to give their talk on stage, and share with our audience a vision, a story, an idea about a wide selection of subjects...

TEDx events are created following TED's model. Our conferences cover regularly subjects such as social transformation, ecological and technological developments, the evolution of common goods through art, design and humanism. Our themes remain open and in compliance with the TED spirit, in order to allow a wide diversity of topics and innovative ideas. Each talk is filmed, then edited and published on the web under a Creative Commons license for wide distribution in schools, professional associations, micro-entrepreneurs ...

Global & Local community

Our talks are recorded and published on YouTube to ensure a wider audience.
